Conergy Americas Announces Brand Integration of Sister Organization, SunTechnics

Distribution Sales Group and Projects Group serves all customer channels within the North American markets.

Denver, CO – In conjunction with a global restructuring spearheaded by Conergy's headquarters in Germany, the Conergy Americas region is consolidating the SunTechnics and Conergy brands under a single name, Conergy. Internal reorganization of the two companies has been underway for a year to streamline operations and take advantage of significant economies of scale. The single brand will be launched at the Solar Power International Conference held in San Diego, California, October 13-16 and completed by year end.

"We strive to offer the best solutions to our customers, utilizing all the products, resources and expertise we've gained as a leading global company. A single brand strategy gives us the opportunity to increase brand visibility and position ourselves as the go-to company to anyone in the market for solar electricity," says Kim McLawhorn, CEO of Conergy Americas. Conergy's large distribution network of solar energy solution providers meets the needs of residential, off-grid and small commercial customers. Formally SunTechnics, Conergy's new Projects Group, focuses exclusively on commercial scale projects.

"We are currently finishing construction of a 3 MW project in Pennsylvania and we have several multi-megawatt projects underway. This is a unique skill set; not everyone can do large projects successfully. We bring unmatched expertise and flexibility including financing mechanisms, product selection, system engineering, construction and system maintenance to enterprise customers investing in solar energy. This allows us to optimize our solution to the requirements of the customer and the project, rather than to a set of predetermined options," says Sarah Hetznecker, Sales Director of Conergy's Projects Group.

John Marcarelli, Director of Distribution Sales Group comments, "This step reinforces Conergy's commitment to fully support our strong partner network through our Distribution Sales Group. We continue to expand our training programs and invest in operational improvements that will help our dealers achieve success in this industry and meet the ever growing demand for solar energy."
